Job opportunity: Web programmer/developer

I interrupt this blogging hiatus to announce a job opportunity.

World Online, my employer here in beautiful Lawrence, Kansas, is looking for another Web programmer to help build cool stuff for our three sites, LJWorld.com, Lawrence.com and KUsports.com.

Our team and our sites have an outstanding reputation in the online journalism industry. We do things other news sites don't even dream of doing, and we're not afraid to take risks. Here's what people have been writing about us lately:

- Editor and Publisher: Dayparting More Popular on Newspaper Sites
- Poynter's Convergence Chaser: Small town, big convergence goals
- Poynter's E-Media Tidbits: Hogging the Awards

If you're in the online news biz, this is the opportunity of your career. If you're not in the online news biz, don't let that scare you; journalism experience is preferred but not required.

Here's a general idea of what we're looking for:

- Expert knowledge of PHP on the Apache Web server.
- Expert knowledge of HTML/XHTML.
- Experience designing, maintaining and programming Web interfaces to databases, particularly MySQL.
- Experience building custom Web publishing systems/tools and managing dynamic Web sites.
- Familiarity (and comfort) with Web standards, CSS, regular expressions, Perl, Javascript and the challenges of presenting information online.

You'd work directly with me. I am a nice guy.

Lawrence is a great place. It's a college town, 30 miles from Kansas City, with a thriving music scene, excellent local restaurants and an outstanding downtown that has put two malls out of business. I'm a city person -- I was born and raised in Chicago and worked in Atlanta before this job -- but I love this place.

What you should know about cell-phone updates

1. Make sure your phone provider offers text messaging (aka "SMS") and that this service is enabled for your account/phone. Most cell phones these days come with it.
2. We offer this as a free service, but be aware that some cell phone providers charge for incoming messages. Then again, others don't. So if you're not sure, contact your provider. (If they do charge, it's likely inexpensive – a few cents per message.)
3. Be aware that the reliability and timeliness of these messages depends on your phone company. We'll hold up our end of the deal and send out the reminders on time – but your phone service provider, which passes the message from us to you, might introduce a delay. This completely depends on your service provider.

How to unsubscribe

Today's Horoscope for Dick Cheney

(Aquarius, born 30th January 1941)

A very close friend or a member of your current peer group -- who means a great deal to you -- has recently found it necessary to go out of their way to tick you off. At least, that's the way it seems. It's worked, too -- better than it should have. You're not just angry, you're furious. Before you let go and let them have it, be sure you're right. Feeling righteous is far better than feeling guilty.

look after our own country, our own people, but I don't have any animosity toward people of a different colour or religion." Jan Gibson, a pensioner from Quorn in Leicestershire, said she and her husband had been members for four years. "I have nothing against coloured people at all. They can't help their colour. I can't help being white," she said. "Our friends know we are in the British National party. They actually agree with us. They have not got the courage to do what we do. A lot of people think as we do."

The release of the list offers a new insight into areas of the country that appear to have the highest numbers of supporters for the BNP.

A total of 192,746 voters cast their ballot for the party in the 2005 general election, just 0.7% of the total vote, restricted to the limited numbers of constituencies where the party put up candidates. Previous analysis of the BNP's support base relied on its recent successes in local elections. The party has its largest numbers of councillors – 12 – in Barking and Dagenham, with strong representations in councils in Stoke-on-Trent and Epping Forest in Essex.

Although the police and the Prison Service are thought to be the only public bodies that prohibit membership of the BNP, many other individuals could face disciplinary action once their membership is known.

Nick Griffin, leader of the BNP, said he had little doubt that the leak was "a disgraceful act of treachery" by disgruntled former BNP officials.

Section 3 of the RRA places a duty on public bodies to eliminate unlawful racial discrimination and to promote equality of opportunity and good relations between different racial groups. Some organisations and firms have dismissed members on the basis of BNP membership. In a leading case, Serco, which supplies transport services to public bodies, was told by the court of appeal it was entitled to dismiss a bus driver after he was elected a BNP councillor. The court said the employee "was treated less favourably not on the ground that he was white, but because of a particular non-racial characteristic shared by him with a tiny proportion of the white population, that is membership of and standing for election for a party like the BNP".

Other organisations, including the prison service and police, have adopted a similar policy to ban membership of "groups or organisations considered to have a racist philosophy". The prison service specified the BNP, the National Front and Combat 18 as groups falling within this category. Applicants for positions in the prison service must sign a declaration confirming: "I am not a member of any of the groups or organisations listed, nor am I in any way associated with racist philosophy."

Some employees have challenged this, claiming it breaches the RRA by discriminating against white people. Afua Hirsch and Haroon Siddique with far-right politics have a surprising number of BNP supporters, such as Tengenbridge in Devon, Bournemouth in Dorset, and rural stretches in Norfolk, Shropshire and Wales.

The list also revealed Leicestershire to be an unexpected heartland of the far right. The county has 960 members on the list, with 80 living within Leicester itself.

In the city's outdoor market yesterday, two women wearing burkas shopped for cut-price jewellery, elderly Caribbean ladies chatted, a man wearing a turban picked out a bunch of grapes, while a long-time local trader tried to persuade them to buy his produce. It was a fitting picture of a place that has earned the unofficial title of Britain's most successful multi-racial city, with a white population of only 59.5%. Predictions are that by 2020 it will become Britain's first city where ethnic minorities make up the majority.

But for some, that is fuelling a growing resentment. Simon Wright, who has worked in Leicester market for 32 years, said: "In a few years time we are going to be playing 'spot the white person' round here." The problem lay not with the long-standing minority ethnic population of Leicester, but with new immigrants, he said. "Asian people have been here for years, they have been born here. It's not about skin, it's about people who come into the country and take everything."

His was a rare voice of discontent in the city centre. Arif Vakey, 30, had experienced little racism in his 15 years in the city. "There is such a mix here, it's a real

Far-right rift

List reveals bitter party infighting

Helen Carter

The leak of the BNP membership list has exposed a rift at the top of the far-right party.

The BNP's leader, Nick Griffin, and his deputy, Simon Darby, took court action last year against six disgruntled former members of the party following a series of resignations.

The defendants listed on court papers, heard at Manchester high court in April, are Kenneth Smith, Scottish regional organiser and head of administration; his wife, Nicholla, Sadie Graham, now an independent councillor in Broxtowe, Nottinghamshire; her fiancé Matthew Single, Stephen Blake; and Ian Dawson.

Blake is the former editor of the BNP's website and is an IT consultant from Stirling. Dawson is the former national organiser for membership.

In December, an internal dispute led to the resignation or expulsion of 60 of the party's local and national officials. For months the rebels had been calling for the expulsion of three other senior officials – John Walker, the national treasurer, his deputy, Dave Hannam, and Mark Collett, director of publicity, whom they accused of bringing the BNP into disrepute.

Graham and Smith launched a blog called enoughisenoughnick, detailing

Nick Griffin and Mark Collett after being cleared of racial hatred charges their complaints, and were swiftly sacked by Griffin. During the dispute that followed, members of BNP security seized a computer from Graham's home. Griffin claimed that they were recovering party property. The BNP alleged the rebels had set up "a treasonous blogspot designed to attack and smear fellow party officials".

In her resignation letter, published on the blog last December, Nicholla Smith resigned from her post as Falkirk organiser.

She said: "I will not be resigning from the BNP and will exercise my right of tribunal should Mr Griffin attempt to purge me. The disgraceful sacking of Kenny Smith, Sadie Graham, Matt Single and myself is further evidence that Mr Griffin has lost control of reality and his defence of ... Mark Collett, John Walker and David Hannam at the expense of good honest BNP people. For as long as the three scumbags remain in the BNP I will refuse to hold office and encourage others to resign their posts too. It was heartening to have received the unanimous support from the other BNP Scotland officials at our regional council meeting on Sunday and since then to have received much support from around the United Kingdom."

A large number of party officials then resigned in support of Smith and Graham or were expelled.

On the blogs

Far-right activists used blogs and message boards to express panic at the risk to their jobs and blame different factions within the BNP. However, some expressed defiance in the face of the leak. Below are comments from sites such as Stormfront.org, a US white supremacist website, used by BNP members, and the North/West Nationalists website. Some anti-fascists have been leaving gleeful comments.

"I don't want to lose my job over this. Just now my mate Chris rang me, he works in the public domain, and all he could do was scream: 'Unbelievable Jeff!' Down the phone at me. I could not calm him down at all."

"This leak is internal, done on purpose ... [BNP leader Nick] Griffin can strike a double whammy. The BNP will appear persecuted with oodles of publicity ..."

"Someone or some people at the highest levels in the BNP has/have to take responsibility for this. I bet a pound to a penny Nick Griffin would not hesitate in making an example of them to restore confidence."

"No company will ever want to employ anyone on the list ever. Class action?"

"There must have been a commie mole within the BNP. This is nothing short of political persecution at its worst."

"If anything happens to my house I'm holding the Decemberist rebels responsible, they had the lists and that's the only way it could have come out." [In December, 50 BNP councillors and organisers resigned and declared themselves to be the "Real BNP".]

"My name is on it as well including my private email address and home and mobile phone numbers but I don't give a stuff, I will carry on as normal."

"All you moaners out there make sure you are not standing by me when the real fight begins. I want someone who can stand up for themselves without blubbing."

Thanks everyone for your valiant efforts so far.

You're amply justifying our hope that many hands can make light work of the thousands of documents released by Parliament in relation to MPs' expenses. We, and others - perhaps you? - are still using these tools to review each document, decide whether it contains interesting information, and extract the key facts.

Some pages will be covering letters, or claim forms for office stationery. But somewhere in here is the receipt for a duck island. And who knows what else may turn up. If you find something which you think

So I said to Ben Firshman...

“Wouldn’t it be cool if Twitter apps on the network could talk to Bugle instead?”

Magic Twitter support

To make Twitter clients magically work with Bugle on a network, we need to mess with BIND.

Create `/etc/bind/db.twitter.com`:

$TTL      604800
@ IN SOA localhost. root.localhost. (
                                4      ; Serial
                                604800 ; Refresh
                                86400  ; Retry
                                2419200 ; Expire
                                604800 ; Negative Cache TTL

@ IN NS 10.0.0.1
@ IN NS 10.0.0.2
@ IN A  10.0.0.1
api IN A  10.0.0.1

Add to `/etc/bind/named.conf.local`:

zone "twitter.com." {
    type master;
    file "/etc/bind/db.twitter.com";
